Complaint Against Murphy Alleged Zoning Violation

Charged with violation of the city zoning law in maintaining an illegally located fuel yard, the M. J. Murphy Corporation, veteran Carmel contracting firm, was summoned early this week to appear before Judge George Wood on November 22nd as the result of a complaint signed by Marshal Gus Englund.

For some time the Marshal has been accused of laxity in bringing zoning law violators into court, particularly operators of the Murphy fuel yard on Ocean Avenue between Mission and Junipero Streets, and it was brought to an issue by complaints voiced before recent Council meetings by the Plaza Fuel Company and the Wolters Wood Yard.

Mayor John Catlin, who made a campaign pledge to enforce zoning laws, has been particularly active in calling for punishment of violators, and while he freely admits that he is interested in the Plaza Fuel Company he insists that he is far more interested in maintaining Carmel's protective laws.

"Enforce the zoning laws or revoke them," declared this lawyer-blacksmith-mayor when interviewed beside his forge at Junipero and Sixth Streets. "The Council has no judicial power, and once it enacts laws the police and the courts are supposed to uphold them. I regard the zoning laws as fundamental to Carmel's unique beauty, for without such restriction we will retrogress into a small, unsightly and sickly imitation of a big town."

The M. J. Murphy Corporation declined to be quoted beyond saying that on November 22nd it would be amply represented in court.

The specific law alleged to have been violated by Murphy is ordinance 96, adopted June 5, 1929. Section 8 states in effect that a fuel yard may be lawfully installed in a downtown business zone if two-thirds of the owners of property within a radius of 400 feet give written consent. Section 17 says that violation of the law will be a misdemeanor and that upon conviction there shall be a punishment of not over $500 fine, or a jail sentence of not over six months, or both.

This ordinance was passed to strengthen the earlier zoning laws of 1925, which was the object of one of the hottest political fights in years.

City Attorney Argyll Campbell will conduct the prosecution, and it is not known at this time who is retained as counsel by the defendant.

handled by the office of Barnet Segal and legal services were given by Attorney George P. Ross, with Etta Maxwell Heath, Association treasurer, especially active in cooperating with them.

Officers of the association are J. A. Boundey, president, Arthur Hill Gilbert, 1st vice president, Ada Howe Kent, 2nd vice president, Nora Grabill, secretary, Josephine Culbertson corresponding secretary.

RED CROSS FUND PASSES $2,000 MARK IN DRIVE

The Carmel Red Cross subscription drive has already raised $2,047.15 in cash and pledges, and workers are highly pleased with the public's response after less than a week of activity toward the $3,000 goal.

FRANK SOTO SENTENCED FOR ILLEGAL WOOD SALE

Frank Soto, 33, a resident of Seaside, pleaded guilty Tuesday morning before Judge George Wood on a charge of selling firewood in Carmel without a license. Sentence of thirty days in jail was handed out, with the understanding that so long as he remained outside the Carmel city limits he need not actually go to the lockup.

RED CROSS CAMPAIGN OPENS FOR BUDGET DRIVE OF $3,000

Starting on Armistice Day, the Carmel Chapter of the Red Cross opened a campaign to raise its $3,000 budget. Deep interest has been shown by the public, and response to this appeal has been gratifying to the hard working members of the committee.

Under chairmanship of Miss Clara Hinds, the workers are Mesdames John E. Abernathy, Gwen Stearns, F. Daniels-Hudgins, Richard Masten, David Marshall, J. B. McCarthy, Everett Smith, Russel Goodnow, Vera Peck Millis, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. Douglas, Helen Sowell, A. G. E. Hanke, Eugene Watson, S. F. Dutton, Edith Shuffleton, Daisy Bostich, Eleanor Yates, Horace Dormody, and Robert Stanton. And the Misses Ruth Huntington, Helen Willard, Etta Paul, Jane Burritt, Mary Trevett, Dorothy Ledyard, Miss Jebb, Kitty Wilkinson, O. B. Hazelins, and Betty Reynolds. Messrs. Earl Graft, Don Stanford, James L. Cockburn and H. S. Crossman are handling the finances.

The splendid work done in Carmel by the Red Cross is too well known to need anything more than mention here, and the goal is expected to be reached within another week.

Artists of Peninsula To Have Home in Carmel

Realizing a dream of seven years, of several thousand dollars needed to complete the purchase of the Carmel Art Association has at last secured a permanent gallery ideally suited to its needs, and a christening to be participated in by the entire region will take place shortly. Ever since the first exhibit in 1927 the Association has considered many plans for securing a home of its own, and yet only this week was the problem solved when first payment was made on the studio of the late Ira Remsen.

In the heart of town on North Dolores Street scarcely a block and a half from Ocean Avenue, the building is on land giving ample area for whatever additions the future may require, and artists are enthusiastic over the facilities offered for hanging their pictures. Canvases valued well in excess of the worth of the property have already been promised and a plan is being worked out to donate these pictures to public subscribers who give generously toward the fund

"I am more pleased than I can say," exclaimed William Ritschel, internationally known marine artist, "and shall do my utmost to assure success of the venture." In this he voiced the feelings of the entire Association.

Besides Mr. Ritschel, others who have promised their works are William Watts, Stanley Wood, Julia Greenwell, E. Charlton Fortane, Myron A. Oliver, Paul Dougherty, John O'Shea, Armin Hansen, Percy Gray, Arthur Hill Gilbert, C. Chapel Judson, Ferdinand Burgdorff, James Fitzgerald, Paul Whitman, J. Maynard Curtis, Elizabeth Strong, Edda Maxwell Heath, Rose Campbell, Josephine Culbertson, Eva Bell Adams, Helen Cheney Brown, Burton S. Boundey, Charles Bradford Hudson and George Kotch, and others.

The Count of Monterey, Viceroy of Mexico, was in a rage. Again his annual galleon from Manila, laden with treasure, had been captured by pirates. He summoned Sebastian Viscaino before him. "Find me a harbor on the California coast," he said, "where my galleons may find refuge." On December 16, 1602—eighteen years before the Pilgrims landed—Viscaino came to anchor in a "Noble Harbor." He named it Monterey Bay.

THE HARBOR OF REFUGE

Today Hotel Del Monte's 20,000 acres edge the Bay of Monterey—the "Noble Harbor" that meant California to Spanish explorer, nobleman, Conquistador, Padre and the courtly Don. So plainly has California's history left its mark upon this place that you miss California unless you visit Del Monte.

For fifty-three years, Californians have found a gay and stimulating leisure here—on championship golf courses (Pebble Beach, Del Monte, Cypress Point), on its hundred miles of bridle path, its polo fields, its 17-Mile Drive, and in its great hotels—Del Monte and Del Monte Lodge at Pebble Beach.

Jo Mora Makes Illustrations For Hotel Advertising

The series of advertisements for the Hotel Del Monte, soon to begin in magazines of nation-wide circulation, designed by Jo Mora of Carmel, are as artistic and striking as anything that has appeared of a similar nature for years. As illustrations of the romance and history of old Monterey, they have an importance, quite apart from their advertising significance. There is no other artist with such exact knowledge of the costumes and appurtenances of the times, for Mora has for many years made a study of the Spanish days in California, and has based his illustrations upon what he has learned.

There are a dozen of these drawings, each of some important feature of Monterey's history, and they will appear from month to month in eastern magazines. The one printed here is a fine example of the series, and is used as an illustration for the Pine Cone, not as an advertisement for the Hotel Del Monte, through the courtesy of that institution.

Jo Mora is better known as a sculptor than as an illustrator, although he began his art career with black-and-white work for the eastern publications. He has illustrated a number of books, one of which "Dawn and the Dons," by Tires L. Ford, was a history of California. The sarcophagus of Junipero Serra at the Carmel Mission is one of the outstanding examples of his work in sculpture.

QUAIL HUNTERS MUST KEEP OFF SANCTUARY

Now that the quail season is in full swing, hunters need to watch their steps in this vicinity. The game sanctuary, taking in a large part of the Monterey peninsula, is forbidden ground to the shotgun experts, and is being carefully guarded by the state game warden. Also the daily bag and the weekly limit on quail has been lessened this year.

While the season has been lengthened by 15 days, running until December 31 this year, it is unlawful to kill but 10 quail, either valley, mountain or desert, per day, with 10 birds in possession. The weekly limit is 20 quail.

Hunters will do well to keep on the lookout for posted lands as many hundred acres have been added since last year to the system of game bird sanctuaries. Reports from all over the state are that there are more quail this year than last, and that the shooting is good.

PROMINENT WOMAN PASSES AWAY HERE

Mrs. Mary Johnson Watts, wife of the artist, William Clothier Watts with a home at the Highlands, passed away last week Thursday after a long illness. She had been prominent in social life in Carmel and was one of the outstanding workers in All Saints Episcopal church.

Funeral services were held from the home with Rev. Austin B. Chinn officiating, and the burial was in El Carmelo cemetery, Pacific Grove. Surviving relatives include the husband, William Clothier Watts, a sister, Mrs. Henry M. M. Russell and a nephew, Philip Kism. Johnson of Toronto, Ohio.

DIRECTIBLE MACON VISITED BY CARMEL SCOUT TROOP

Twenty-two members of Carmel Boy Scout Troop 86 were taken to Sunnyvale last Saturday and treated to a close view of the mammoth Macon. On the way home they went through the grounds and buildings of Stanford University, saw the home of ex-president Hoover and got home in ample time for supper.

Among those making the trip possible were Scoutmaster John Neikirk, Louis Levinson, Hurd Comstock, Henry Bauernschmidt, Ranald Cockburn, W. W. Wilder and Thom Neikirk.

CARMEL FISHERMAN BRING BACK FORTY TON CATCH

When fishermen like Trev Shand, Louis Levinson and Dave Matzke go out to get fish, they get fish. Not just a mess of two dozen, but a mess of forty tons and all beauties was what they brought back into Monterey, Monday afternoon following an overnight cruise in the seventy-foot Francis, of Tacoma. Having no use for over a few pounds a piece of the best, they disposed of the rest to a cannery and came home for a well-earned rest.

Leaving Sunday as guests of one of the owners of the Francis, they made the sardine seining grounds off Half Moon Bay during the night and soon were seeing the intricate work of spreading and pulling aboard nets worth over $6,000 apiece, and the use of other equipment running into many thousands. Over fifty purse seiners were working in the vicinity, giving an idea of the size of these schools of fish along the coast.

CARMEL MISSIONARY SOCIETY TO MEET

The November meeting of the Carmel Missionary Society will be held at 2:30, Wednesday afternoon, November 22 at the Community church. An interesting service of thanksgiving has been arranged, to be followed by tableaux illustrating the book, "Eastern Women Today and Tomorrow."

Mrs. Harry Hilbert will be the reader for the tableaux. The public is cordially invited.

CARMEL CLUB WOMEN GREET COUNTY FEDERATION HERE

The Carmel Women's Club was hostess Tuesday to over fifty members of the Monterey County Federation of Women's Clubs at the Girl Scout house on Sixth Street.

The morning business meeting was presided over by Mrs. Joseph Goodspeed, of King City, president of the Federation. Following luncheon, an entertainment in charge of Mrs. James Cockburn, of Carmel, featured Miss Ruth Thurman, the noted singer, in three English selections, accompanied at the piano by Miss Mary Walker, and next three tap dances by Mrs. Ranald Cockburn and Miss May Payne, accompanied by Miss Puss Chinn. Three more songs were given by Miss Thurman, and the program was concluded by Mrs. James Cockburn reading two poems on the Hawaiian Islands, by Don Blanding.

The afternoon finished with tea and refreshments, and the hostesses received many compliments on the floral decoration of the room, done by Miss Sophie Bugdorf.

WESTON'S PHOTOGRAPHY

The exhibition of portrait photography by Edward Weston continues to draw attention and admiration. It is being viewed by many in the Denny-Watrous Gallery and is considered one of the finest shows he has had in Carmel. The entire exhibit of forty portrait prints represents work done within this year. The reduced size of the prints and the fact that they are untouched marks a new period in Edward Weston's work.

The exhibit can be seen on the walls of the Gallery until the twenty-fourth of this month.

Word was received in Carmel this week of the marriage of Miss Dorothea Alice Harter to Mr. Philip Nesbit. Mr. Nesbit, the well known artist, made his home in Carmel for several years.

CHURCH BAZAAR COMING NOVEMBER TWENTY-FOURTH

The Community Church will hold its annual Autumn Festival and Bazaar on the afternoon and evening of November 24th. There will be many diverse features that will include entertainment by Fenton Foster's noted glee club, and besides the usual refreshments there will be food booths with candy, home made mince meat and other delicacies for sale. Not forgetting the kiddies, there will be a grab bag that will make their eyes like saucers.

For the afternoon Mrs. Melvin Dorsett will be the hostess, while in the evening, Mrs. Eula Douglass will serve in that capacity. Heading the main committee is Mrs. D. E. Peggy Logan, Edna Lockwood, Dixon, and working with her are Agnes Nye, Louisa Belo, Flo Holm, and Carrol Phillips.

NO CHARGES FILED IN PURSE DISAPPEARANCE

Last week the police detained

Mrs. Robert Miller, youthful mother of a three-months-old baby, in connection with the disappearance of a purse from the Carmelita Shop. Helen Wilson, proprietor of the shop, was unwilling to sign a complaint against her despite the fact that she admitted possession of the purse, and Judge George Wood dismissed her after a severe lecture.

BRUSH FIRES BRING WARNING FROM RANGER

Warning that the danger of fire is by no means over, Ranger Frank A. Moore, of the Division of Forestry, with headquarters in Carmel, says that until heavy rains come there will be as much menace of brush and forest fires as there was in the heat of summer. Proof of this is given by two recent blazes, one of which threatened a large area of Carmel Valley a few miles above the town on the property of W. A. Cook.

"No fires may be started outside the city limits until after December 1st without a written permit from this office," said Moore, "and if rains do not come by then the restriction date will be extended."

Prompt reporting of smoke will go far toward getting a fire under control, and this may be done by 2272, or any fire alarm number that calling Ranger Moore at Carmel will in turn reach him.

SCOUT COURT OF HONOR
HELD AT SUNSET SCHOOL

With the presentation of badges, demonstration of Scout proficiency in first aid and kindred work, musical numbers and other entertainment the Boy Scout Court of Honor at the Carmel Sunset School last week brought out a large attendance.

Opening with Ceremonies by Troop 77, it had skits that included First Aid by Troop 86, of Carmel, Scout Song, the glee club of the 6th grade, Knot Tying by Troop 92 and a scout take-off by Knight and Josselyn. Then came presentation of Awards, the Second Class Pins by Ed Simpson, the First Class Pins by Jack Schroeder, the Merit Badges by H. S. Crossman and the Life Badge by A. S. Hastings.

Closing exercises were by Troop 77, and came to a conclusion with the Benediction by Al. Young, Scout Executive.

FOOTBALL HEROES WILL CELEBRATE AT DEL MONTE

San Francisco may celebrate "Big Game Night" on November 25 with its usual pomp, but three of the most important players on the Stanford team will be missing from the festivities.

And all because they will be guests of honor at the "Big Game Night" celebration on the same evening to be held in the Ball Room at Hotel Del Monte.

Billy Corbus, Bobby Grayson and Frank Alustiza, all three stars in the recent Stanford victory over the Trojans, will be on hand for the Del Monte celebration. They are being brought to the Peninsula by Gordy Campbell, star quarterback at Stanford last year.

Because of the fact that the big game will be played this year at Palo Alto, a capacity crowd is expected at Del Monte. More than one hundred reservations have been made already for tables in the Ball Room.

MAN WITH THE HOE IS CARMEL'S MYSTERY

That funny noise we've all been hearing in Carmel lately? What is it? Some one asked Gus about it, and the village sleuth went to work in earnest. Sound detector in hand he started down the street. The indicator went wild. First it pointed one way and then another. The sound seemed to be coming from all directions.

It was the man with the hoe. Here and there and everywhere were people with hoes and rakes and shovels and cutters and bags of fertilizer, surrounded with packed shrubs, unpacked shrubs, bulbs, and miscellaneous flowers.

And every day now the flower men are busy. Pine View Nursery, Holman's Department store, H. A. Hyde and Company and others having trouble living up to the N. R. A., for no kidding, Carmel has become garden conscious this year, and everywhere the mob spirit is spurring neighbor to excell neighbor, for all know that now is the time to plant. Heathers, shrubs, stocks, Schizanthus, Nemesis, primulas, pansies, bulbs, and many other annuals and perennials.

Let's go now! All together folks!

Gaining his university training at U. S. C., followed by the University of California, at Berkeley, Dr. Covault attended the University of Colorado for four years. He was then on the house staff of the Cottage Hospital at Santa Barbara in association with Dr. W. D. SEARCH TO BE HEARD IN
CELLO RECITAL THURSDAY

Frederick Preston Search, of Carmel, nationally known cellist, and Frank Moss, noted pianist, will be heard in recital Thursday evening, November 23rd, in the auditorium of the Monterey Presidio officers' club under auspices of the Monterey Peninsula Musical Arts Society.

Mr. Search will play selections by Rameau, Bach and Raveo, followed by three numbers of his own composition. There will be featured a new composition for cello and piano, entitled "Poem Heroic," by Ruth Bingham Herman, president of the Society. Concluding number will be the biggest on the program, that of the Sonata by Rachmaninoff, with the cello and piano.

Tickets are at a popular price, and may be had from the club committee headed by Mrs. Whitney Smith.

Capt. and Mrs. De Witt Blamer, Mrs. M. V. Brocklebank MacAdam and Comdr. and Mrs. Martin Jonas Peterson motored up to San Francisco on Thursday to attend the production of one of Mrs. Peterson's plays, "Minerva Sets The Stage," which was given at the Fairmont Hotel by the Cap and Bells Club.

Mrs. Peterson writes under the name of Katherine Brocklebank and a number of her plays have been produced and published, among them, "Love Apples," a three-act comedy which had a successful run at the Travers Theatre in San Francisco two years ago. It later was produced in Pasadena and now is to be published by the Banner Play Co. "Fog," a one-act melodrama was produced last year at the Travers Theatre and is to be published in the Banner Play anthology which is coming out in January, 1934.

Mrs. MacAdam is Mrs. Peterson's mother, who, with the Petersons have taken the Maxwell house on Carmelo street for two years.

Community Players Score In Coward's "Hay Fever"

by Hal Garrett

A brilliant audience packed the Community Playhouse last night. The attraction was Noel Coward's comedy "Hay Fever." This piece abounds in clever lines and absurd situations. It is a hard play to put over because there is little plot, and much depends on the manner in which the lines are read. Subtlety of inflection, facial expression, gestures become all important, as do tempo and groupings.

Directress Paula Dougherty deserves credit for tirelessly training a personable cast until they were able to negotiate the difficulties. "Hay Fever" which borders on farce, concerns itself with an artistic and Bohemian family whose house includes only one guest chamber. When it develops that each member, without the knowledge of the others, has invited a week-end guest to occupy the same spare bedroom (two women and two men), complications arise. But this is nothing to what happens when the guests themselves arrive. As Robert Browning once said of a Bach fugue in full cry, "now the kennel a yelp."

I will not rob your enjoyment by revealing any of the hilarious situations. Let me recommend you to secure tickets at once. There are high spots in the cast as well as in the play. Eleanor Watson as Actress-mother Judith is exuberant and luxuriant, and contributes tellingly to the general hilarity.

Janet Large handles her role with refreshing skill. A future awaits this actress. Quaint-voiced Holly Smith as flapper-guest scores brilliantly with Lloyd Weer (English diplomat) in their scene in which travel is haltingly discussed. Somehow Weer has acquired the adenoids necessary to give his speech an English flavor.

Patricia Monteagle at her first appearance on any stage proves a commendable acquisition. As daughter Sorel she sparkles with animation. Lucien Jones who took over the brother and son role on short notice, gives the convincing portrayal we have come to expect from him.

Lloyd Tevis as father-novelist adds a balance of solidity to the erratic group and succeeds in being real and human. Lee Tevis, another new-comer to our stage, plays the maid Clara amusingly and with the brogue and gestures that go with the part Thomas Crosthwaite as Prizefighter Sandy, smitten on Judith old enough to be his mother, simulates the fascinated youth effectively.

The single set which serves for three acts is superior to most living rooms on the professional stage and no wonder! Rhoda and Dick Johnson built it and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Fish loaned the furniture. The costuming by Magnin provides a veritable style show, worth the price of admission to any woman.

RHYS WILLIAMS ADDRESSES LARGE AUDIENCE ON SOVIET

Addressing a capacity audience that included many Carmel notables, Albert Rhys Williams, writer and traveler who has spent many years in Russia studying the Soviet, told frankly of the inner workings of the U. S. S. R. Speaking under auspices of the John Reed Club at the Carmel Community Playhouse, with Ella Winter as chairman, he declared that in view of the great strides made in Russia the world can no longer ignore her as an international force.

"While all objectives of the Five Year Plan have not been attained," he said, "immensely more has been accomplished than many of its proponents dared hope. When you figure the inertia that had to be overcome before any forward movement whatever was made, it is in the nature of a triumph that is spreading farther every day."

Mass education, he declared, is rapidly reducing illiteracy, stopping epidemics, curbing the use of strong liquors and stabilizing the union of the 180 nationalities that speak 150 languages and hold sacred more than 50 different religious faiths. Especially among the youth of the land are rapid developments taking place, and he feels that their zeal in accepting revolutionary ideals speaks well for the future of the people under leadership of Stalin.

CABIN INN HAS

ANNIVERSARY DAY

Saturday, November 18 is anniversary day at the Old Cabin Inn, for on that day the restaurant was re-opened under the management of Gussie Meyer, a chef of note.

Miss Meyer says that it is hard work, doing all of her own cooking, but she says it pays, and expresses keen satisfaction at the remarkable business she enjoys. Incidentally, she credits her advertising in the Pine Cone for a bit of her good fortune.

O'NEILL DRAMA READ BY

GROUP AT THE PINE INN

The Play Reading Group of Carmel, headed by John Gribner, met Monday evening at the Pine Inn, through courtesy of John Jordan, to do Eugene O'Neill's drama, "Diff'rent."

Among those reading parts were Richard Masten, Hildreth Masten, Fern Hyde, F. O. Robbins, Frank Heffling and William Deems. Next Monday the play read will be "The First Mrs. Fraser," by St. John Ervine. Attendance is increasing, and in view of the more than seventy-five there last time the public is urged to come not later than eight o'clock in order to be comfortably accommodated.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Soul and Body" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, November 19, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston. The Golden Text will be: "Yea, in the way of thy judgments, O Lord, have we waited for thee; the desire of our soul is to the name, and to the remembrance of thee." (Isaiah 26: 8) Other Bible citations will include: "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." (Romans 8: 11, 14)

The Lesson-Sermon also will include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The material body and mind are temporal, but the real man is spiritual and eternal. The identity of the real man is not lost, but found through this explanation; for the conscious infinitude of existence and of all identity is thereby discerned and remains unchanged." (p. 302)

O'SHEA HAS EXHIBIT AT STANFORD GALLERY

A collection of 25 oil paintings by John O'Shea, of Carmel Highlands, is being shown at the Stanford university art gallery until November 19.

This group of paintings is vivid in coloring, and includes scenes painted in the South Seas, American southwest desert and subjects around Carmel bay.

Royal Cortisoz, noted art critic of the New York Tribune, says: "In John O'Shea's art there is a technical adroitness supporting the admirable characterization of his subject which is fairly exhilarating."

CARMEL CLINIC WILL OPEN AT HOSPITAL ON TUESDAY

A clinic for free diagnosis and emergency treatment of outpatients will start next Tuesday morning at the Carmel Hospital, in Carmel Woods, with Dr. John Gray attending, under sponsorship of the newly organized Carmel Hospital Auxiliary Board headed by Mrs. Sidney Fish.

Fostered by Mrs. Edith Shuffleton, the group perfected its plans at a meeting in the Pine Inn early this week and secured services of Drs. John Gray, Paul Hunter, E. F. Kehr, Willard J. Covault, J. McCarthy, David Matzke and Margaret N. Levick, and dental treatment will be contributed by Drs. Clarence Terry, Ray Brownell and J. L. Hughes, with their services to run in rotation of one month each. Hours of the clinic will be in the morning from eight to ten every Tuesday and Saturday.

Members attending the meeting that formed the Auxiliary Board were the Mesdames Sidney Fish, president, Eugene Marble, secretary, Edith Shuffleton and Louis Levinson, the Misses Anita Doud and Audry Walton, and Messrs. Arthur T. Shand, H. S. Crossman, Henry Dickinson, vice president, James Cockburn, treasurer, and the Rev. Austin B. Chinn.

Finances will be cared for as far as possible through annual memberships of three dollars each, and the entire proceeds will go for dressings, prescriptions and like necessities, and in cases more complicated than those requiring clinical treatment co-operation will be sought with the county hospital and the Carmel Red Cross.

SUNSET SCHOOL NEWS

by Lee Van Atta

The repetition of "THE VISION OF SIR LAUNFAL" went off very well. The auditorium was packed well. The auditorium was packed parents and friends. Dick Tevis as Sir Launfal played his part very well. The rest of the Eighth Grade aided in making it a very good production.

The Eighth grade Art exhibit is a very fine exhibit indeed. Among the pieces of art done by peninsula artists were: "The Patriarch," by William P. Silva, two studies of Cypress Trees by M. DeNeale Morgan, "Evening On The Ocean," by F. W. Haasis, and "Cypress Point," by Mr. R. J. Gale, the Eighth Grade teacher.

Last Friday morning at 11:20 in observance of Armistice Day a very interesting assembly was held at Sunset. First, the Boy Scouts gave the morning "salute" the audience joining also they joined in the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner." Then the Seventh Grade gave a poem "In Flanders Field," by Lieut. John McGray, a surgeon. At 11:40 Mr. J. P. Pryor a retired veteran of the Great War gave a talk on that subject and also on peace, why we should fight for it and keep away from war.

Last Friday evening the much detained Boy Scout Camporee took place. The program scheduled for 7:30 began at 8:20. Carmel Martin was master of ceremonies. Several skits were given by the Boy Scouts depicting what they would do in case of an emergency. The troops that did these were troop 86 Carmel scouts and troop 90 of Monterey. The thrill of the evening was of course the awards. Many boys went home with a new brass badge. The second thrill was a skit by Winsor Josselyn and Allan Knight showing how much sense a scoutmaster is supposed to have. The Seventh Grade Glee Club sang four songs, "The Keel Row," "Scotlands Burning," "Are You Sleeping?", and "Auld Lang Syne."

At the Executive Board meeting a Minuteman committee was founded. The other committee formed was The Courtesy committee. The two chairmen are Courtesy, Geraldine Kerner and Minute, Lee Van Atta.

Doll House Builder Has Unique Plans for Homes

When Hugh Comstock built his first "doll" house in Carmel several years ago he had little idea of the effect it would have on the architectural development of the art colony.

The first of scores of "doll" houses was planned merely as an exhibition place for a group of unusually striking dolls made by Mrs. Comstock. But it proved to be far more than that.

Mothers and fathers bringing their children to see the dolls admired the little story book building with its curved roof, broken roof lines and latticed windows. Many of them wanted homes of the "doll" type for themselves.

Comstock and others built them. And when merchants saw the charm of what seemed to be pictures lifted from the pages of fairy story books buildings in the business district were built with broken lines and curves.

Thus did the house that was built as an exhibition place for Mrs. Comstock's dolls influence the architecture that with Carmel's enchanting setting has made the art colony a modern fairy land.

Comstock recently began developing another building idea, an idea that experienced builders believe will stir up the same enthusiasm in home owning that the first "doll" house did.

Anticipating a demand for small and inexpensive homes in the near future, Comstock has spent several months planning what he describes as a unit house.

These little houses will incorporate standardized features which will effect economies, but not to a degree to sacrifice individuality. Comstock believes the unit house will permit ownership of a house of low cost, good construction and high in quality of design.

The main advantage of the unit house idea is that it permits expansion or addition of other units such as bedrooms, etc. Another outstanding advantage is facility in erection.

By careful choice and pre-fabrication of materials Comstock hopes to cut the construction time in half.

Carefully thought out and soundly constructed houses of the type Comstock has planned would compete with small steel and "ready-cut" houses on the market today.

Comstock has already completed plans for three unit houses and within a week will start construction of one at the corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street in Carmel for exhibition purposes.

Features of the unit house in addition to its ability of expansion, sound construction, low cost and speedy erection will include an all metal fireplace and chimney without a single brick or stone of masonry. The design of this is unique in character with its copper front and iron binding and hearth, as well as its functional ability as a combination stove and fireplace.

Other features are new type lighting fixtures, improved interior wood finishes, oak block floors with the charm of tile, all metal kitchen sink, fan ventilation and ant-proof cooler shelves, specially designed hardware and built-in cabinets and furniture designed to conserve space and to harmonize with the finish and style of the house.

Comstock will have the aid of a prominent Carmel artist and a well known craftsman in perfecting certain details and maintaining a high standard of artistry in the unit houses.

Mrs. George Seidenack, wife of a well known artist and herself a painter of no small repute, will assist Comstock in planning interior decoration, while John Catlin, mayor of Carmel and an outstanding wrought iron worker who receives orders from all parts of the country, will make wrought iron latches and other hardware.

Although known best for his small houses, Comstock is a versatile builder and is responsible for a number of large peninsula homes, including Pebble Beach homes of W. W. Wheeler and Stuart Haldorn, and the Haseltine home in Carmel Valley.

He is tremendously enthusiastic over the "unit house," and expects it to result in a revival of building activity on the Monterey peninsula.

Carmel--How Come?

By Winsor Josselyn

"The first time I was down here," said John Jordan, managing owner of the Pine Inn, "was when the Highlands Inn was under construction, and Frank Devendorf wanted me to take it over. I returned to Oakland and didn't come back to Carmel until nineteen twenty-one when I took the Pine Inn. Since then I've been seen around town quite a bit, and once when I wasn't looking they put me on the council and made me police commissioner."

James Hopper, fiction writer and war correspondent who has followed half a dozen campaigns, came here in 1906 through acquaintance with George terling. Fred Bechdolt, Grace MacGowan Cooke and Alice MacGowan came here after his telling of the place, as did Michael Williams, now editor of a prominent Catholic newspaper.

"Yes," said Fred Bechdolt, "Jimmie and I planned to write a novel on San Quentin penitentiary and Carmel was a good place to do it. That was in the fall of nineteen-eight, and next year I came here to stay." The book they wrote was named "9009," and was a sensation when it ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post.

Dr. Henry Hollison, who has been confined to bed for the past several years following an infection, was summering in Estes Park when he felt the lure of California and drove out to locate in Burbank. To escape the heat, he and Mrs. Hollison came up to Pacific Grove in 1923, then shortly afterward he opened an office in Carmel. "I believe that the first person I met was Maude Hogle," said the Doctor. "Somebody told me about the Abalone League—probably it was Charlie Van Riper—and right away I became a native."

A Dream of Beauty In Architectural Design

by Angelo Hewetson

W. H. Hudson said, "A sense of the beautiful is God's best gift to the human soul, so it is, and to pass it on to others in some measure must be happiness."

This afternoon, about half an hour before sunset, we walked along Carmel's incomparable beach. We were enjoying the wonderful coloring, the trees, the water, the lovely silhouettes of Mounts Carmel and Devendorf, and the outline of Lobos.

Small flocks of sanderling were feeding near the water's edge, coming in and going out with each wave, running as fast as their little legs could carry them, and probing for their food. Every rhythmic move of these charming little birds was mirrored in the wet sand. Small groups of Heerman's gulls stood on the beach at several points.

Surf-scooters were actively engaged in collecting their suppers, nonchalantly diving through the waves just at the right moment to avoid being tumbled upon the beach. Further out, an occasional shag came into the picture, flying low over the water.

In the east, the soft penciling of the dark pine trees was wonderfully heightened by lovely, rose colored clouds. Exquisite silver-green shimmering light was reflected in the wet sand, and caught by some of the windows of the houses on the ocean front.

As we neared the point, and in the middle distance of the picture looking south, we came upon what I will describe as an exemplification of rugged individualism in a virulent form.

I refer to the majority of houses on the point, which range from the Sun-kist orange box motif through the entire gamut of unlovely shelters which masquerade as designs.

It is axiomatic that Carmelites are lovers of beauty or they would not be attracted to this Paradise. Having come here, is not the incomparable natural beauty of this peninsula a challenge to us to do our very utmost to preserve that beauty? Just because we happen to have purchased a lot here does not really entitle us to do as we please with it. Unless we more or less measure up to the standard set by Mother Nature, are we not striking a blow at the beauty of the surroundings, whether we realize it or not?

Beauty is not a question of dollars and cents, but rather of taste, and of course not the variety that one has in one's mouth, although that also has its place. Design is not a question of whim or fashion, nor do the principles of design change with the administrations or the weather.

Carmel is growing up, and it seems to be that it is high time that an architectural clinic, art commission, or something was established to help those who perhaps might not be able to afford competent architectural service to realize more closely their ideal house.

I still think that Robinson Jeffers' house is the best composition on the point; in fact I wrote some verses about it two or three years ago, four lines of which are:

Tor House so rests upon its site
As somehow to suggest it might Have sprung from out the rocky land,
Aided perhaps by fairy's wand.

Owen Wister says in his delightful preface to the Monograph of the Work of Mellor, Meigs and Howe, architects of Philadelphia, "What makes a house look right? Precisely what makes a piece of music sound right, a piece of verse or prose read right, or any good fabric of art of any kind—sound, words, color, substance—compel perceiving minds to give instant assent to its validity."

No one realizes better than I how difficult these questions are to the individual, but surely by tactful co-operation we can overcome much. Someone has said that difficulties are made to be overcome, and that impossible things are merely those which up to the present time have not been done.

Santa Barbara has done much through its art commission to guide those who may not have had the opportunities or the aptitude for artistic training, and thereby is developing a more harmonious city, instead of allowing things to drift along, each one doing the best he knew. This latter method is apt to produce what we may, perhaps, describe as a form of Hungarian goulash.

Most of us realize that what is best for the community is also best for us as individuals, and I am in the direction of any non-political effort to enhance the beauty of Carmel. Beauty should be a question of principle, not of policy only.

Bliss Carmen in his lovely essays, The Friendship of Art, says: "Beauty calls for our best, and only by giving our best in the service of beauty can we learn to fully appreciate the delight that beauty offers us in return."

ITO DANCERS IN RECITAL AT COMMUNITY PLAYHOUSE

Pleasing a critical audience Saturday night at the Community Playhouse, Michio Ito and his company appeared in a dance recital that featured a wide variety of numbers and a competence of execution. The famous Ito himself did not confine his dancing to the modern nor to the Oriental, but created rather an effect of rhythm that has well been termed "music in motion."

Lillian Powell scored with her Ballet Sentimental, and Betty Jordan and Warren Crosby were graceful in their duets and solos. Waldeen, a dramatic little person, and Anton Roland at the piano completed the company, and Mr. Edward Kuster was being complimented at the conclusion of the evening upon his bringing the dancers to Carmel.

COAT LEFT BY ROBBER IS ONLY CLUE FOUND

The clue of a worn blue coat with a name and a number in one sleeve is all that the Carmel police have had to work on in the Carmel Cleaners robbery of a week ago. The coat was left by the robber as he changed into new garments and made a getaway, and the attempt to trace him through cleaning establishments in the region has so far proven futile.

Talbert Josselyn, who turns out sports stories for Collier's, came here from Berkeley in 1914, and except for a few seasons in Pasadena and the east has remained a Carmelite in good standing. Commenting on meeting people, "I guess Perry Newberry was the first writer I knew here. He and I used to chat on the business of writing fiction while he worked on his house down there on Carmelo Street, and he gave me more insight into the construction of a story than I'd found in a dozen text books."

Gelett Burgess in his syndicated column says:

"Humor nowadays is highly specialized and each well-known wit has his own line. If I should try seriously (God help me!) to classify our own writers and select an All-American team of humorists, I should pick the following:

Epigram—Dorothy Parker.
Paradox—Oliver Herford.
Parody—Carolyn Wells.
Wise Cracks—Marc Connelly.
Drollery—Robert Benchley.

And perhaps Benchley should be the captain because he most closely approaches by ideal of ponderous trifling. His essays are often mere parodies of scientific jargon, but he can blow up an insignificant idea—the way one inflates a rubber pig—until it is a gigantic jest, with such skill that he never bursts the bubble."

Paul Hubbard of Salinas visited Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Birch here Wednesday.

OUR FUNDAMENTAL LAW

There will be a test of the Carmel zoning ordinance in the courts when the charge against M. J. Murphy, Inc., is heard. Although the violation alleged in the complaint is for conducting a fuel business in a restricted district, the very fundamentals of the zoning law are at stake. Has the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea the right to withhold from its entire area industries which it considers detrimental to its best interest?

The present infringement is not of serious importance in itself. There are two other fuel yards within short distances of the Murphy yard, and legally there. A third does not materially affect the welfare of the city. What is important, both for the city and the Murphy corporation, is the question of occupancy of restricted areas by lumber yards and wood-working establishments, prohibited under the same ordinance from all parts of Carmel.

For years the M. J. Murphy corporation has sought an arrangement with the city through which its various industrial plants, one on San Carlos at Seventh, one on Monte Verde and Ninth, and another on Ocean Avenue between Mission and Junipero Streets, could be located together on property on North Junipero Street. While this would be in violation of the zoning ordinance, it was considered as a compromise because certain of the Murphy sites were established prior to the enactment of that ordinance, and therefore could not be affected by it. However, such a compromise was opposed by property owners so bitterly that it was finally dropped, and until recently matters were left in statu quo.

The present charge will open up the entire matter, undoubtedly, and we should learn from the court's decision just how strongly we built that zoning ordinance, and in how far it protects the village.

A NEED SUPPLIED

The long desired art gallery for Carmel is now a fact. The Carmel Art Association has purchased the studio building built by "Rem" Remsen on North Dolores Street several years ago, and will promptly move into it and have its first exhibit in its own building.

This is the best news for Carmel in a long time. It gives the artists a home. It gives the people of Carmel a perpetual exhibition place for paintings and sculpture. It gives the visitors to Carmel an objective, and enhances the advantages of the village as a place for visitors to come.

"Where can we see the work of the artists?" has ever been a question to puzzle the hotelmen and merchants of Carmel, as strangers sought information. To keep the open-house schedules of a score of artists, whose studios welcomed guests only at certain hours or days, was impossible, and there

CROOKED RIVER

The hands that flung the saddle have forgotten the desire . .
 Oh, hound across the living hearth! Oh, whistling on the stair;

Oh, flint rung in the crackling dawn, and one too far to care,
 And fewer of the booted men who stride around the fire;
 And vast upon the afterglow
 The vested Sisters praying . . .

The hands that flung the saddle have forgotten the desire!

The hands that flung the saddle have forgotten the desire . .
 Oh, awe between the mesa's knees, oh, fire behind her shoe!
 Oh, riddle of the pulsing rim of onyx notched with blue;
 Oh, ended quest of aching trails, where driven withers tire . .
 And round the emptied valley cups,
 The wheeling eagles saying:

"The hands that flung the saddle have forgotten the desire."

—Theodosia Teel Goodman

MIRACLE

Silence engulfed my island heart
 And made me strangely isolate.
 I could not go, and none could come
 Beyond the stern, forbidding gate.

Then, by a sudden miracle,
 The barrier cleft wide apart.
 Love dared a path, and life, dry-shod,
 Followed your words into my heart.

—Elinor Lennen

AUTUMNALE

The warm brief autumn lingers still
 The motley colors of the grass
 Whisper as winds pass
 Over the quiet hill.
 Gaunt poplars watch the winds go by
 And quiver nude above the stream
 While the road's white gleam

Blends with the pale grey sky.

 And breaks the silence of the sky
 With sullen cry;
 Its wings a rippling wand.

The warm brief autumn lingers still
 And the frail colors of the grass
 Darken as clouds pass
 Over the greying hill.

—Charles Beardsley

REQUEST

When I am lying still I cannot see
 Exquisite flowers you send to honor me
 Or smell a single rose a child may bring
 And cannot hear the songs of those who sing.

So bring your flowers and come without delay
 And let me feel your friendship while I may
 Your gentle deeds unto this hour belong was no general place to send the inquirer. Next to a free public library; a Carmel art gallery was the best asset the town could have.
 'Tis now I need your love; your faith; your song!

And Carmel must help pay for this advantage. The artists will give to the gallery fund better than its entire cost in paintings, drawings and sculpture. Their genius and labor will pay for the building and grounds, but it will require the help of all Carmel to translate their work into dollars and cents—the kind of coin which sellers of real estate demand. This opportunity to serve the village, assist the Carmel Art Association to the ownership of a fine gallery, and to acquire a marvelous piece of art work at little cost will be given the public shortly.

In the meantime, Carmel rejoices that it now has an art gallery where the work of its painters and sculptors may be housed, and where exhibit after exhibit may follow through the months of the year. The long-felt want has been supplied.

SANCTUARY

Many of us in Carmel who have enjoyed the friendship of coveys of quail this summer and fall, watching them toss heads as they ambled through the yards, perhaps fed them from our tables, are anxiously waiting the result of state legislative action seeking to protect them in this new game sanctuary. Will the quail, as in previous Novembers, disappear, killed or frightened away by the hunters? Or will the law protect?

One of the pleasantest features of Carmel has been the presence of these birds, and the lack of fear in their relations with humankind. During the summer and early fall they seem to grow bigger, plumper and bolder. Yet within a day or two of the opening of the hunting season, always before they have vanished completely. This year there is the hope that they will continue to amble through the yard, nodding their plumes, and searching for food. Game wardens are here to enforce the new law, and the promise is made that hunting will be kept outside the sanctuary limits.

A WARNING

The authorities of Carmel are issuing a warning to the people to give careful attention to men who beg for old clothing at the door. Burglaries and thefts are credited to these itinerants who under the plea of seeking charity, are investigating the ways of easy entrance to the house.

A number of recent burglaries have followed close behind the old-clothes beggar, and must be connected with his visit. Do not let him inside the house, or allow him to linger on the property. Refer him to the Red Cross, and have them examine his qualifications. If he is honest, they will give him help. If not, the proper people will be notified.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

Michio Ito, the internationally known Japanese dancer who gave a program in Carmel last week, has traveled the world over in search of original material. Egypt especially held his attention, and in the architecture of his work there is to be found much of this influence.

"I have always danced," he said. "To me it is the one expressive outlet, just as an artist produces pictures and the sculptor his statuary."

Carmel reminded him of southern France, with the same feeling of great forces in conflict where the sea met rugged headlands. He had heard of the region many times, but this was his first trip here and he looks forward to returning as soon as programs give him an interval.

Thomas J. Hefling, the newly appointed Carmel Deputy Chief of Police, License and Tax Collector who will give Gus Englund a hand in the busy three months ahead, wants it known that he was not treasurer of Cooke County, in Montana, as this paper erroneously reported recently. He never heard of a Cooke County in Montana. But he has heard of Ravalli County in that state, and he has been treasurer of it, but in the past three years he has been a resident of our own Carmel.

For thirty years he was interested in state politics up there, and among other offices he held were those of Deputy State Treasurer, Auditor of Railroad and Public Service Commission and member of the Bank Examiner's Staff.

Ravalli County is in the western part of the state and is named after an early French missionary. It is given to diversified agriculture and especially to sugar beets.

The question around town is: Does the Deputy Chief of Police wear a star, and can he walk right up and arrest you like Gus can?

The girl and the three men who were standing in front of a Dolores Street store window might have been vacationing here from a small inland town. She was slim and as plainly dressed as if headed for the beach, and her taffy-colored hair was drawn smoothly back and knotted at the nape of her neck. At a glance her face was plain, the features small and regular. The three men were in rough hiking clothes, and stood with hands in pockets, their eyes on people up and own the street.

At last the four got into a close-coupled, red-wheeled Ford that hadn't been washed since the last rain, and drove down toward Ocean Avenue. Not stopping for the traffic sign, they turned the corner and disappeared upstreet.

Hollister? Make it Hollywood. The girl? She was Ann Harding.

Howard Talbot, art critic of the San Francisco Wasp-Newsletter has this to say of our own Moira Wallace's exhibit of paintings at Gump's gallery in that city:

"Moira Wallace has the glamour-tinted imagination of the very young artist, but her work does not strike one as cloyingly romantic. Many of her figure studies have their being in the realm of fantasy, and are plainly symbolical. A group of her drawings and paintings are based upon a Balinese motif, and are interestingly decorative. She has figure paintings of the South Seas that are realistic in trend, with sensuousness of outline and color. There are light and graceful sketches of dance attitudes, and a few sincere and thoughtful portraits, notably that of Ella Winter. Some of her work shows a tolerantly cynical slant, in the vein of her striking composition, "St. Anthony With Tarnished Halo." Others have a broodingly mournful mood."

There was a merry twinkle in John Hays Hammond's eye as he glanced up from the papers on his desk and studied the brawny lad in his twenties that stood quite at ease before him.

"So you want a hard job to tackle," Hammond said, a note of hesitation in his voice. Then becoming more definite, "all right—I have just the job for you. Rough country, unruly cowboys that chew tobacco and beds not fit to sleep in."

"When do I start?" the youth asked.

"Tomorrow," said John Hays Hammond and glanced down at the papers on his desk. The interview was at an end.

The year was 1907. The youth was Sam Morse. Fresh from victories as captain of the Yale football team, his ears still ringing with the cheers of the crowd, young Sam traveled inland into the great San Joaquin valley. Here in his late twenties he assumed charge of a gigantic irrigation development plan.

Sam Morse rode the range, which today is one of the largest hotel corporations in the country. Not only does it operate Del Monte hotel, but it owns more than 20,000 acres of land, 100 miles of highway, four golf courses and the exclusive Pebble Beach area.

It was principally Morse's vision and imagination that developed Del Monte and Pebble Beach into the country's leading recreational playground and center of social activity. It was his keen perception of finance that steered Del Monte safely over the last five years when virtually every large hotel went into the hands of a receiver.

For there is still in Sam Morse that same enthusiasm for work that there was the day in 1907 when John Hays Hammond gave Del Monte Properties company him his first job.

"How are you?" we asked Senator Ed Tickle, the uproar of the California Upper House.

"I don't know—how are you?" he retorted.

"Swell," we replied, "and may we quote you on that?"

The way of the bringer of bad news is hard. Even at the age of four and a half, the tow-headed and blue-eyed Dickie (who says he is going to improve the roads in Canada when he grows up) has learned this.

The other noon he panted uphill to the house above his, rattled the doorknob and piped to the lady who came out, "My mama says there is a fire next your house and for you to come but that I didn't start it!"

Carmel may be missing something after all in not having the Monterey sardine reduction smells drifting over its hills and dales if a story coming to us of late may be believed, telling of a human life being saved by it.

It seems that a surveyor got separated from his companions in the wilds between the Presidio and Alta Monterey. Night came and he was more lost than ever, and for three days he wandered further into the sage brush jungles. To make his plight worse, the tantalizing odor of sardines floated up from the reduction plants and the poor fellow imagined that he saw fish in the chaparral. Faint from hunger he fell and clutched at a bush; he gnawed it. Food! All the verdure was thickly layered with sardine oil from the years the vapors had drifted by.

He is now forming a company to can the sardine plants, and won't Carmel be jealous when he makes his first million?

So far as the California right-of-seizure laws are concerned, doctors still use the horse and buggy when dashing to calls.

The laws relate that office equipment, instruments and many other things essential to the practice of medicine may not be grabbed by creditors, and they end up by saying that horses and buggies are also exempt. Automobiles?

Well, it ought to stimulate the horse business unless collections improve.

Now that Agua Caliente is on the wane with all its gambling wickedness, there is one Carmelite who dares tell his secret for the perfect roulette system learned down there but about which he was sworn to secrecy. Fifty cents is the absolute limit the player can lose, no matter how straight or crooked the table.

"Put fifty cents on roulette table. Walk to bar. Win, lose or standoff—stay at bar."

There's no telling what grandmothers will do nowadays. Who would think that one recently walking along through the woods carrying a bouquet of gentle wildflowers had a huge stilson wrench concealed in the blossoms? She had found the wrench washed out of sand by the early rains, and who is afraid of the big bad wolf if she has a husky stilson in hand?

Cracks by George Easton, while leaning against a store front on Ocean avenue. "That guy?" Why he hasn't got money enough to flag a bread wagon. Yeah, and he got that way by buying things a dollar down and a sheriff a week. Well, to make a long story more boring—

If you've heard 'em before, blame George.

Last June, the Cootes, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A., left Carmel in a cozy camping-van headed into the great out-beyond. Back from Bangor, Maine—and you'll have to admit that the van couldn't get much further away without swimming—comes a photograph of the Cootes' car making its way down Main street.

"Not a screw has worked loose," writes Ralph A. Coote, announcing 7,500 miles traveled since he left here. And D. H. Harthorne smiles happily. Harthorne built that camp-van body, and drove every screw home tightly. He has a right to feel proud of the job.

The Cootes were at West Roxbury, Mass., the first day of November, and expect to be back in Carmel some time in February.

SON OF MRS. ELMER COX DIES IN LOS ANGELES

John Powell, 23, son of Mrs. Elmer Cox, passed away in Los Angeles last Sunday following a long illness. He was a Stanford and U. S. C. student, and had spent many vacations in Carmel.

THE VILLAGE NEWS-REEL

Tuesday afternoon the home of Mrs. Otto Bardarson was the setting for a delightful tea held in honor of Mrs. Ferdinand Haasis, who is leaving Carmel shortly for Cheyenne, Wyoming. Miss Clara Kellogg poured during the tea hour, and forty guests were present for the occasion. The guests were: Mesdames Sarah Rhineheart, Ernest Calley, John Crichton, Cecil Haskell, J. Fulton, Markham Johnston, Mathew Beaton, Joseph Schoeninger, Vera Peck Millis, Karl Rendtorff, Grace Plank, John Bathen, Herbert Cehner, Joseph Trowbridge, Emma Fagerstrom, Daniel Lockwood, Philip Montmor-ency, Francis Johnson, Harry Farley, A. Granger, Louis Levinson, Melvin Dorsett, Hurd Comstock, Edwin Ewig, Willard Wheeler, H. Heninger, Edward Kuster, Maillard Klein, and Misses Eleanor Smith, Jean Wallace, Clara Kellogg, Ella Kellogg, Marion Ohm, Benita Minnaman, Althea Kendall, Anna Maria Baer, Madeline Curry, Blanche Heninger, Rachael Miller.

Mrs. S. A. Trevett returned to Carmel Monday night from the East where she has been visiting for the past two months.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Masten left this morning for the south for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ross, who have been living at the Sutton Place, have taken the Kocher apartment in the La Giralda Building.

Mrs. Markham Johnson spent the week-end in Palo Alto.

Mrs. Edward Leonard more popularly known as "Ninon" of the San Francisco Chronicle Style Pages visited Carmel this week, and stopped by the Pine Cone office to pick up the latest news items on Peninsula activities.

Mrs. Ed Warner was hostess to the Woman's Auxiliary of the Community church last Friday afternoon and evening. A cafeteria lunch was served and whist and bridge were played during the afternoon. About twenty-seven people were present and a prize was awarded to everyone.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Nathan of Sacramento spent the last week at the Dr. Gray cottage on Carmelo street.

Mr. Henry Adamson of San Francisco was a visitor in Carmel over the week-end.

Mr. Don Staniford and son Bill returned last Sunday from Los Angeles where they attended the U. S. C.-Stanford game. While there they attended the performance of "The Drunkard" and visited afterwards with the cast of former Carmelites.

Mrs. Ruth Young returned to her position at Whitney's this week after a three weeks vacation. Part of her vacation being spent in San Jose.

Mr. W. O. Swain is enroute to Carmel from Los Angeles, where he has been spending a short time having just arrived from the East.

Among the students from Stanford and Menlo Junior College who spent the holiday at their homes in Carmel were: Lad Hyde, Wallace Goodnow, Speck Watson, Johnny Campbell all of Menlo and Jean Thompson, Arne Anderson and Ted Leidig of Stanford.

Mr. Howard Stackpole, son of Mrs. Etta Stackpole of Carmel, spent the week-end with his mother at her home here.

Mrs. Wilbur Claywell and Mr. John Claywell spent a few days in San Francisco this week.

Mrs. Grace Rodgers spent last week in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Buck and Mrs. Julian Phillips of Pasatiempo drove to Los Angeles to see the U. S. C.-Stanford game. Mrs. Phillips stopped over in Carmel to visit her mother before returning to her home.

Mrs. Vera Koch was a visitor in San Francisco last week.

Acclaimed by all who attended that the riding party and barbecue given by Miss Elaine Lawson last week was one of the most successful of the season. Miss Lawson's guests rode from the Lloyd Tevis Stables in the Auga Jito tract and returned later for a barbecue there. Afterwards dancing was enjoyed at the Lawson summer home in Carmel Valley. A number of friends from Salinas and Monterey were present, including Miss Mary Francis Hughes, Mr. Dick Sears and Mr. Henry Hasty of Carmel.

Among the guests at Peter Pan Lodge in the Carmel Highlands were: Mr. and Neville de B. Priestly of Kashmir, Mr. and Mrs. N. Binoer and Mrs. William Dehe of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Winkler of Ores, California, Mrs. Lawrence Fox of Montecito and Mrs. Benjamin Boas of San Francisco.

MYRTLE LEONARD AT DENNY-WATROUS

by Hal Garrott

Myrtle Leonard, contralto of the San Francisco Opera, sang to a happy audience in the Denny-Watrous Gallery Saturday night. Every number was warmly applauded. Recalls were numerous and several encores were granted. The German Lieders by Hugo Wolf, Brahms, Richard Strauss, Erda's Warning from Wagner's Das Rheingold, Respighi's Pioggia, and several others were sympathetically sung and much enjoyed.

Myrtle Leonard's voice is deep contralto with adequate range, which she uses with technical, emotional, musical and dramatic understanding. Her tone has variety ranging from appealing pianissimo to sonorous fortissimo. Possessing a powerful vocal organ, Miss Leonard employed just enough tone to fill the little gallery. Consequently the rafters did not ring, neither did our ears. All of which are plus signs. Now for a minus or two.

This reviewer offers the following merely as his personal opinion, doubtless not shared by many in the audience. No woman should ever sing Water Boy. It's a man's song, and above all, a Negro's. Annie Laurie with the soloist at the piano, not very appealingly sung, is out of place on a high class recital program, as is the old Samson and Delila warhorse.

Ever hear about the Scotchman who laid a new Cedar shingle roof over his old one using iron nails? It's a good story, but too long to tell, because his roof will last for 75 years or more, and the joke won't be on him, it will be on his grandchildren. They are the ones that will have to buy the next roof for that house.

CARMEL PROMISES FILM TO STARTLE FANS SOON

The Carmel Theatre is about to startle the town with a picture, the theme of which is so daring that even the management awaits its reception with bated breath. Not much information is available at headquarters, for, apparently, the Carmel Theatre prefers to burst its bomb at the premiere of the unusual film which will reach the Theatre in the near future.

Its title is "Captured," and whatever the mysterious dynamite of the story may be, it is assured of fine presentation by the exceptional cast. It seems certain that "Captured" provides its best roles for culine lineup are Leslie Howard, the male players, for in the mas-Doug. Fairbanks, Jr. and Paul Lukas, among others almost as popular.

Information from Hollywood indicates that the locale in this Warner Bros. picture is a war-time prison camp. But the intimation is that this is merely the background for the TNT drama contained in the yarn. The most important of the feminine parts, perhaps the only girl in the film is Margaret Lindsey, late of "Cavalcade." It seems that "Captured" will bear watching for.
